RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Hospital for Special Surgery, New York, NY (7/2013 – 7/2015)

- Ultrasound-Guided PRP Versus Whole Blood Injection for the Treatment of Gluteus Medius Tendinopathy: A Double-Blind Randomized Controlled Trial (Dr. P. Moley)
 - Evaluation of two treatment groups, IRB Approved, Currently recruiting participants
- Retrospective Study of PRP for The Treatment of Gluteus Medius Tendinopathy
 - Evaluation of pain, function, disability for a cohort treated with PRP (Dr. P. Moley)
 - Accepted for poster presentation at the 2015 HSS Annual Fellows Research Day
- Fluoroscopically Guided Caudal ESI for Axial LBP as a Result of Central Disc Protrusions: A Prospective Outcome Study (Dr. G. Lutz, Dr. P. Moley)
 - Evaluation of pain, function, patient satisfaction for a cohort of treated with a caudal ESI
 - Accepted for poster presentation at the 2015 HSS Annual Fellows Research Day

New York-Presbyterian Hospital-Columbia/Cornell, New York, NY (10/2011- 6/2014)

- Evaluation of Musculoskeletal Ultrasound Learning: Live Instructor vs. Video-Led Instruction vs. Self-Directed Learning (Dr. C. Visco)
 - Creation of original MSK US instructional video teaching US fundamentals, knobology, scanning techniques, and anatomical measurements using US

SUNY Downstate College of Medicine, Brooklyn, NY

- Case Report publication to the Association of Academic Physiatrists (Accepted for Presentation to 2010 Annual Meeting): CNS manifestations of a patient with HTLV associated primary lymphomatous meningitis, Jackie Weisbein, MD, Paul Pipia, MD, James Lee, MS4. (4/2009)
- Selenium and Vitamin E Cancer Prevention Trial (SELECT), 2007
 - Assisted Dr. Richard Macchia in conducting the Selenium and Vitamin E Cancer Prevention Trial (SELECT) (2007) for prostate cancer
 - Responsible for participant vital signs, interviews, entering participant data in the SELECT database and by ensuring that participants received digital rectal exams and blood draws for PSA levels.

University of Westminster, London, England (5/1996 – 8/1996)

- Investigated the biomechanical properties of rat tail tendon which was used for modeling and analysis of biomechanical characterization of human tissues in Dupuytren's disease (Led by Dr. Andrew Afoke)
- Dissected and prepared rat tail tendon fascicles from Sprague-Dawley rats
- Tested and characterized rat tail tendon's physical and material properties including temperature related tensile strength curves and fiber-matrix ratios
- Dr. Andrew Afoke's biomechanical characterization of Dupuytren's disease was published in 1998

Curriculum Vitae: James J. Lee, MD

Northrop Grumman, Advanced Technology & Development Center, Bethpage, NY (1997-98)

- Assisted Dr. Ray Meilunas in experimentation and analysis for several DARPA funded research and development projects
- Microcharacterization of thermal degradation mechanisms in polymer composite systems with IR Synchrotron radiation at Brookhaven National Laboratory's National Synchrotron Light Source
- Characterization and analysis of fiber-matrix interface regions of polymer composite materials using an Atomic Force microscopy (Digital Instruments Atomic Force Microscope)
- Developed polishing protocols for interface regions of advanced ceramic composites, composite core honeycomb structures, single-fiber graphite-polyamide composites, and polymer composites
- Responsible for the design and construction of a purge-gas seal for a FT-IR spectrometer
- Development and documentation of heated-cell cure cycle, diffuse reflectance, and KBr pellet transmission FT-IR spectroscopy methods for advanced ceramic matrix composite materials analysis

AWARDS AND HONORS

- The National Dean's List 1995, 1997
- United States Academic Academy All-American Scholar, 1997
- National Engineering Week Structure Design Winner, 1997
